Background: My research started in Brazil and focused on occupational health, including thinking styles, job satisfaction, and mental health. After moving to the U.S., my research focus shifted to the promotion of mental well-being among rural underserved populations, such as Latino immigrants, farmworkers, LGBTQIA+ and international populations. I have also utilized innovative methodologies to evaluate academic programs for underrepresented students in health professions. My publications have been published in Portuguese, Spanish and English and have been cited in articles published in 25 different countries.
